(A)

Many kids help parents to do housework at home, like doing the dishes and taking out the trash. In return, some kids can get money or something else from their parents.

But some people think it's important for kids to see that we all have a duty to keep our home clean. Children shouldn't be rewarded for the housework.

However, other people hold different opinions. They believe that money encourages kids to do more housework. It also teaches them real world lessons. They can learn about how we need to work to make money.

(B)

There was once a rich king called Midas. He loved gold more than anything else.

One day, a god got lost in the king's garden. Midas looked after him very well.

The god was thankful. He said to King Midas, "Whatever you ask of me, I'll give you."

"I would like everything I touch to turn into gold," Midas said.

From that moment, his dream came true. At the beginning he was very excited. But as he reached out for a grape, it turned into gold. When his beautiful daughter kissed him, the girl turned into a golden statue at once.

Midas cried sadly and begged the god to save him. The god told him to wash his hands in the river. When he returned to the palace, everything he had touched had changed back.
